A Scale of Pases

These comelies beddes do playnly showe, eache rebeldes fall end,
And wher's hynous crime is, the Queene for to offend. Exchange &

Although the times are plagued these by Id jinces trulpy feathes,
And brought for the innocentes, to sondry joyet ched entes;
That may not fast a waunting be, to thole they leave behinde,
Is it lished their treuous must appear, long heve in fetterd mynde,
Therefore the smart of groweth of length, into a bloudy felde,
Cuen to the rebelles overthro, except the traitors yelde.

For the that quarres the theople, partaining there her grace,
Wholfe fame made rebelles often fore, the picture of disgrace:
Spe he it is, he goeth fast, with Marsis noble traque,
Who will the his jaynces cande, but their demerits bringe:
Whose shewere he will have honoied, in middest of all her eyes,
And knowe to be a royall ppynt, eken in Despyght of thys.
