INTRODUCTION

The Gardiner Family

The Gardiner family first came to prominence through the endeavors of Luke Gardiner. The son of a land steward, Luke Gardiner became a banker and senior partner with Arthur Hill in Castle Street in Dublin. He also served as M.P. for the boroughs of Tralee and Thomastown in the period 1725-55, becoming a Privy Councillor and also holding the offices of Vice Treasurer of Ireland and Surveyor General of Customs. In 1711 Gardiner made a judicious marriage to Anne Stewart, sole heiress of Alexander Stewart and a direct descendent of the Viscounts Mountjoy and Earl of Blessington.

Luke was succeeded by his eldest son, Charles Gardiner (1720-69), who was M.P. for Taghmon, Co. Wexford, and, like his father, a member of the Privy Council and Surveyor General of the Customs. In 1741 he married Florinda Norman, daughter of Robert Norman of Lagore, Co. Meath. On the death of his maternal relation, William, 3rd Viscount Mountjoy, and 1st Earl of Blessington in 1769, he inherited the Mountjoy estate comprising lands in Cos. Tyrone, Donegal, Antrim and Kilkenny titles. Charles Gardiner died in November 1769 and was succeeded by his eldest son Luke. Born in 1745, Luke became M.P. for Co. Dublin and was Colonel of the County Dublin Militia. During his Parliamentary career, both in 1778 and 1781, he famously introduced measures for Catholic relief.

In 1789 Luke Gardiner was elevated to the peerage, becoming Baron Mountjoy. In 1795 he was created Viscount Mountjoy of the 2nd creation. He married Elizabeth Montgomery (1751-1783), eldest daughter of Sir William Montgomery of Magbie Hill in Scotland, in 1773 and, after her death, he married Margaret Wallis (d. 1839) in 1793. He was killed at the Battle of New Ross on 5th June 1798, while leading his regiment of Dublin militia.

Luke was succeeded by the second son of his first marriage, Charles John (1782-1829). He was a minor of 16 years when he inherited his father's titles and vast estates and wealth. He married his first wife, Mary Campbell (1786-1814), in 1812 and had a daughter, Harriet. His wife died in 1814 whilst residing at Saint-Germains in Paris; her funeral and wake held at 10 Henrietta Street cost a sensational £4,000.

In 1818 Charles John, by now 1st Earl of Blessington of the 2nd creation (1816), took as his second wife Marguerite Power (1789-1849), widow of Maurice St. Leger Farmer. Until the Earl's death in 1829 the Blessingtons toured Europe extensively, famously befriending Lord Byron at Genoa in 1823. The cost of such travelling was an enormous burden on their Irish estates and as a result these became heavily encumbered. In 1827 their daughter Lady Harriet, barely 15 years old, married Count Alfred Guillaume Gabriel D'Orsay (1801-1852), an artist who had accompanied the Earl and his wife on their continental tour. The marriage settlement, amounting to £40,000, exacted a hefty claim on the Earl's finances. They separated after a few months.

On the death of the Earl all the family titles became extinct. The Countess became a celebrated authoress in her own right penning works on various subjects in an effort to boost her precarious financial situation until her death in 1849. The Countess and her companion Count D'Orsay held famous soirées. Towards the end of their lives they lived in relative penury. Following the death of Count D'Orsay in 1852, his former child bride, Lady Harriet, married the Hon. Charles Spenser Cowper.

The Estates

The Gardiner papers relate to the lands purchased and developed by successive generations of the Gardiner family in the city and county of Dublin. Luke Gardiner began purchasing land for building development on the south of the river in the early 1700's and also notably in Henrietta Street in 1721, where he resided at No.10 from around 1730 till his death in 1755.

A shrewd acquisition followed with the purchase of the Earl of Drogheda's estate in North Dublin. This comprised the Lordship of St Mary's Abbey and The Grange of Clonliffe. These lands were actually purchased jointly by Luke Gardiner and Brabazon Ponsonby, Earl of Duncannon, in 1729. Gardiner acquired Ponsonby's share a year later. The magnitude of the transaction is evident considering that Gardiner Street, Place and Row, Mountjoy Square, Blessington Street, Montgomery Street, Florinda Place and Gardiners Mall also known as Sackville Street, situated in St. Mary's Abbey, all commemorate the family. Gardiner also acquired lands in North County Dublin in the baronies of Santry and Coolock.

The family fortunes were significantly augmented by the inheritance in 1769 of the Mountjoy estate with lands held principally in counties Donegal and Tyrone but also in Antrim and Kilkenny, these latter two being sold in 1803 to pay debts on the estate of the late Luke, 1st Viscount Mountjoy. Building projects in Dublin were financed by rents and profits coming from these estates. The last major building project was that of Mountjoy Square carried out in the 1790's under the supervision of the second Luke Gardiner.

The principal residences of the Gardiner family were 10 Henrietta Street, a property in Phoenix Park and Mountjoy House in Co. Tyrone; Charles John, 1st Earl of Blessington also lived in London and later in Paris, visiting his Irish estates occasionally.

Following his death, much of his estate was sold to pay debts. This included Blessington House as the property in Henrietta Street became known, while the remainder was held in trust to provide for his widow. In 1846 many of the lands outside Dublin were sold with the remaining estates being eventually sold in the Landed Estates Court in one lot in 1874, purchased by Charles Spencer Cowper for £120,000.

The Papers

The papers were acquired by the National Library in April 1952 (Accession No. 1118) from Messrs Barrington and Son, 10 Ely Place, Dublin, and were part of a larger acquisition including papers relating to the Mountnorris, Gabbet and Salterbridge estates. These papers were subsequently treated separately.

The Gardiner papers cover the period 1667-1898 and are mostly concerned with the administration of the Gardiner and Mountjoy estate, with leases, mortgages, rent charges being the most common deeds. The largest category of these consists of leases granted to individuals for properties in Dublin City, making this a particularly good source for those researching the development of Georgian Dublin. A large proportion of these deeds also contain survey drawings of the premises concerned. Mortgages illustrate how the estate was eventually overwhelmed by mounting debts.

As well as papers relating to the estate, there is also some marriage and testamentary material relating to both family and non-family members. However, there is no personal correspondence of any kind, neither are there any records relating to the firm of Messrs Gardiner and Hill, Bankers, nor is there any material relating to the role of members of the family as members of the Irish Parliament.

Interestingly there are documents relating to the forebearers of the Gardiner's who held the Mountjoy and Blessington titles, these being the Boyle and Stewart families, thus providing details of lands inherited by Charles Gardiner in 1769.

Arrangement of the Collection

The three main sections are estate, family and miscellaneous, the latter being material not relating to these papers. As there are large series of certain categories of deeds, it was considered appropriate to arrange the material by category of deed, subdivided by county.

Numerous other manuscripts for the Gardiner family also survive, including family correspondence; the various repositories are listed in Richard Hayes: Manuscript Sources for the History of Irish Civilisation, (11 volumes, Boston 1965).

The collection is generally in good condition, although there are some documents which have suffered from mould damage and others which are too brittle to be opened. The vast majority of the documents are parchment and require a little surface cleaning to remove trapped dust.
