INTRODUCTION

Biography

Colm Tóibín was born in Enniscorthy, county Wexford in 1955. His family has lived in or near the town for generations and were involved in the local community and politics. Colm’s father Michael Tóibín (1913-1967) was a secondary school teacher in the Christian Brother’s school in Enniscorthy. He was fascinated by local history, founding the Castle Museum in the town, and writing about the town’s history and heritage. In 1998 these writings were edited and published by his son as Enniscorthy: History and Heritage.

Colm Tóibín was educated at the Christian Brother’s school in Enniscorthy and then St. Peter’s College, Wexford. In 1972 he went to University College Dublin, where he studied History and English, graduating in 1975. Tóibín spent the next three years in Barcelona, where he taught at the Dublin School of English and followed the political developments in Catalonia and Spain in the wake of General Franco’s death. In 1978 Tóibín returned to Dublin and started, although never completed, an MA in Modern English and American Literature. It was in the early 1980s that his career as a journalist began, and he wrote for In Dublin, Hibernia, The Sunday Tribune and Magill. In 1985 Tóibín left his position as editor of Magill and travelled through South America, attending the trials of General Galtieri and others. Some of his journalism from this period, and his later travels in Africa, is collected in The Trial of the General.

Tóibín’s first book Walking Along the Irish Border, a collaboration with Tony O’Shea was published in 1987. His first novel The South, set in Spain and Ireland, although finished in 1986 was not published until 1990, and it won the Irish Times/Aer Lingus Literary Prize in 1991. Since the publication of his first novel Tóibín continues to write award-winning fiction and non-fiction including: The Sign of the Cross; The Heather Blazing, short listed for the 1999 Booker Prize and The Master, winner of IMPAC Prize and Prix du Meilleur Livre Etranger for the best foreign novel published in 2005 in France. His books receive international acclaim and have been translated into twenty languages. Tóibín also continues to work as a journalist writing for The Sunday Independent and The London Review of Books. His Love in a Dark Time: Gay lives from Wilde to Almodovar is mainly comprised of pieces from The London Review of Books. Tóibín has edited literary anthologies and collections of essays, as well as writing Introductions to works. In August 2004 his first play Beauty in a Broken Place was staged at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin.

The papers

This Collection was purchased by the National Library of Ireland in 2006. The collection is made up of handwritten and typescript drafts, various edited proofs, correspondence, ephemera and newspaper cuttings. There are also a small number of video and cassette tapes. The majority of the material covers Tóibín’s literary career from the mid 1980s until 2006, although there is some early material relating to his father. The collection is contained within 25 boxes and is generally in very good condition. There are two further items from Colm Tóibín in other collections within the library; a letter to Michael Hartnett (MS 35,915 /5), and a letter to John Jordon (MS 35,112 /11).

Arrangement

The material in this collection has been arranged into nine sections. The first four sections deal with Tóibín’s literary works; fiction works; non-fiction works; plays and poetry and journalism. Within the first three sections the material has been sub-divided by publication, and in the fourth divided into ‘Journalism’ and ‘Book reviews and literary criticism’ and then arranged by date and publication. The remaining five sections contain; firstly works by other authors, mainly about Tóibín; secondly material relating to Tóibín’s father Michael and the family’s links to Wexford; thirdly correspondence, this has been further subdivided into ‘Professional’, ‘Response to writing’ and ‘Personal’ and then arranged chronologically; fourthly Ephemera and personal items and finally Newspapers and other media material, which contains material about Tóibín and his works.

Assessment

The Colm Tóibín Collection is an important collection of literary and journalistic material from one of Ireland’s leading authors. Tóibín’s fiction works are well represented in this Collection, especially his most recent work The Master, as is his play Beauty in a Broken Place. The material relating to his non-fiction work is less comprehensive; although there is much material for Homage to Barcelona there is very little for Sign of the Cross. Most of the journalism material dates from the 1990s and 2000s when Tóibín wrote for The Sunday Independent and The London Review of Books. There is very little material from the time he was based in Dublin in the 1980s or when he was travelling in South American and Africa.
